1.1.1 Home

The screenshot shows the homepage of the Baking Bites website. At the top, there is a header bar with a back button, forward button, close button, and a home icon. The URL https://Baking-Bites-Home is displayed in the address bar. Below the header is the Baking Bites logo, which includes three icons: a green rolling pin, a yellow whisk, and a blue spatula. To the right of the logo are 'LogIn' and 'Sign Up' buttons. A navigation menu below the logo includes links for Home, Recipes, Contact, About, Members, and Hacks. A search bar with a magnifying glass icon is also present. The main content area features four images of baked goods: a chocolate raspberry cake, s'more cookies, a giant donut cake, and oreo cupcakes. Each image has a caption below it: 'CHOCLATE RASPBERRY CAKE', 'S'MORE COOKIES', 'GIANT DONUT CAKE', and 'OREO CUPCAKES'. To the right of these images is a large text box with a light blue background. The text in the box reads: 'Welcome To Baking Bit', followed by a message from the owner: 'Hello and Welcome ! I'm Areej, and I Believe anyone Can Learn To Confidently Make Recipes Worthy of Celebration.' It also includes a link 'More about Me >>'. Below this is another text box with the message: 'Wanna Cook Like an Expert !! Here Some Hacks You Gonna Like'. At the bottom of the page are links for 'Terms and Conditions' and 'Contact Us'. Social media sharing icons for Facebook, Twitter, and a download arrow are located at the very bottom.

Small Silicone Lids Are Adorable (And Useful)

They keep your coffee warm and your Mason jars sealed

When my colleague Kendra tested silicone lids (a newish market-disrupting kitchen tool that claims to be a one-stop solution for covering pots on the stovetop and in the oven and for covering bowls to store leftovers) she received, as part of the winning GIR set of lids, some ridiculously tiny ones. Silicone lids that could never ever cover even the smallest pot or pan, but that were the proper size for covering a cup, or a small ramekin.
